JOSEPH GOES TO THE BANK.

Joseph, who works in town, was paid eighty thousand shillings as his monthly salary. He did not know what to do with the money. "I fear someone might steal it," he said. His friend Alex advised him to take the money to the bank for it would be safe there. "I can't give away my money to the bank, I worked so hard for it," cried Joseph. "The bank will not steal your money, it will keep it for you until the time you will want to use it," replied Alex. Joseph accepted to go to the bank. They joined the queue and waited to be served. The cashier helped them to open up an account. Joseph signed the deposit form and deposited his money. "Shall I be able to withdraw some money?" He asked the cashier. "Yes, of course," he answered. After you have signed the withdraw form, you can withdraw any amount of money depending on how much you have on your account. The cashier got a pass book and indicated the amount of money Joseph had on his account.

"Now Joseph you have got eighty thousand shillings on your account," he said as he handed the pass book to Joseph.
