S.1 ENGLISH LANGUAGE ASSIGNMENT

1. Introduce yourself to each other. Share with your partner your name, where you live, your former school, and what you like to do during your free time. Tell him/her about your family. State the family name, number of siblings, and the responsibilities of the different members of your family.
2. Share how your family works together to have a peaceful relationship. Write bullet points for your sharing.
3. Families are usually beyond the nuclear one. Write down what you remember and what you learnt about nuclear and extended families in Social Studies at the primary level?
4. Write down two differences between nuclear and extended families.
5. We all started from somewhere. We had great grandparents on both our father's (paternal) and mother's (maternal) sides. We then have grandparents, aunts, uncles and cousins.

When you try to follow your origin or lineage it comes out as a family tree as shown in below.

A family tree is a chart that indicates the relationship between the different members of a family.

Why is it important to know our family lines? Find out from your parents or guardians about the relationship you have with different people you closely relate with, and how they are related to you. Using the information you have gathered about your family, draw your family tree, and present it to the class.

You may use the computer graphics to design your family tree.
